Nebraska Hosts Kansas Today In Season's Big 8 Opener

'Strap on the helmets tight—When the going gets tough the tough get going—A brand new season starts today.'

Whatever your favorite college football cliche is—, they all apply today as Nebraska opens the 1979 Big 8 season against Don Fambrough's Jayhawks from the University of Kansas.

Tom Osborne's Huskers are 4-0, with wins over Utah State, Iowa, Penn State and a 57-0 nod over New Mexico State last Saturday in Lincoln. This week in the UPI poll, the Cornhuskers are ranked No. 4 in the country.

Kansas is 1-3, with its only triumph a 37-18 verdict over North Texas State in Lawrence on Sept. 29. The Jayhawks have lost at Pittsburgh and Michigan, and to Syracuse, 45-27, last Saturday in Lawrence.

Against New Mexico State, the Huskers were never threatened as junior I-Back Jarvis Redwine led the offense and junior linebacker Kim Baker paced the defense.

Redwine—the Huskers' 'Offensive Player of the Game'—started his first Cornhusker contest—filling in for the injured I. M. Hipp—and got 120 yards on 16 carries, while also scoring his first NU touchdown—a one yard jaunt in the first quarter. Redwine has now got two, consecutive 100-yard games to his credit, Penn State (124) and New Mexico State.

Baker—the Defensive Player of the Game—had 11 total tackles, including eight unassisted stops and one pass broken up.

Against Syracuse, the Jayhawks led 21-7 after the first quarter and 21-17 at the intermission but the Orangemen exploded for 28 second half points to claim the win. Kansas was paced by senior quarterback Brain Bethke, who completed 11 of 22 passes for 124 yards and one score, while also rushing for 67 yards on just six carries.

Osborne is now 59-16-2 during his seventh year as the Huskers' head coach. Against Kansas, he is unbeaten, with a 6-0 mark.

Fambrough is beginning his second tenure as the KU boss. He was the Jayhawk head coach from 1971-74, but was replaced by Bud Moore. At the end of last season, Moore was then replaced by Fambrough, who has a school and career mark of 20-28-1.

The Huskers have not lost to Kansas since 1968, when the Jayhawks beat NU in Lincoln 24-13. That was the same KU squad that went on to play in the 1969 Orange Bowl, losing to Penn State, 15-14.

Since '68, Nebraska has beaten Kansas 10 straight times, including last season's 63-21 win at Lawrence and 52-7 in 1977, the Jayhawks' last trip to Lincoln.

Whatever the cliche, it is Big 8 football time today for both Nebraska and Kansas as Husker fans everywhere welcome Fambrough and his staff, along with the Jayhawk players and their fans to Nebraska's Memorial Stadium and the 103rd consecutive sellout.

THE TOUCHDOWN CLUB OF NEBRASKA

One of the groups most instrumental in helping the University of Nebraska Athletic Department grow in the field of intercollegiate sports is the Nebraska Touchdown Club.

Contributions from TD Club members have enabled the Cornhuskers to build a fine grant-in-aid program and continued support from the Touchdown Club, and groups like the Husker Achievement Awards, the Extra Point Club, and the Cornhusker Beef Club, will insure that the Nebraska Cornhuskers will always hold a prominent place in the college sports world.

The University of Nebraska Athletic Department salutes the many members of the Touchdown Club and takes this opportunity to say a sincere "Thank You."

College of the Day

Journalism

The School of Journalism is now a free-standing school with the rights and privileges of other UNL colleges.

By Robert Mussman Assistant Director Office of University Information This is an historic moment for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln School of Journalism, said R. Neale Copple, the former Director who now carries the title of Dean.

The Board of Regents on Sept. 14 removed the School of Journalism from beneath the administrative wing of the College of Arts and Sciences and made it a free-standing school with the rights and privileges of other UNL colleges.

That the School of Journalism now has the status of a college, one of the units which are the major components of a university, is not the focus of Copple's "historic moment", however.

"This is an historic moment for the School of Journalism because the change of status provides the logical time for us to take a hard look at ourselves, and that's what we're going to do as we develop a new journalism degree.

"Very shortly we will have appointed a new student advisory board and a new professional advisory council. They will meet with the School of Journalism faculty to do the self-study and help develop the philosophy for the new degree.

"The charge to this group will be to look into the needs of journalism and the goals of journalism education for the future and to make plans for a degree program which will meet the needs of our profession for today and tomorrow," Copple said.

The new Dean described the move upward in administrative status as a logical step in the School of Journalism's growth.

"Journalism was being taught on this campus in 1917," said Copple, the seventh director in the school's history, "but it was not until about 25 years ago that the University made a serious commitment to the development of a first rate professional school for the training of journalists."

Starting with the basic newseditorial sequence for the training of reporters and editors, the School broadened its professional education programs into advertising and then into broadcasting. In 1975 it began offering graduate education.

25 Years of Growth

Over these 25 years the School of Journalism has grown in size—it now has about 1,100 undergraduate majors and 70 to 75 graduate students—and has improved in quality. "Ours was only the second school of journalism in the country to have all its sequences accredited under a new program," Copple noted.

Organizationally the School was also ready for its new status. "Basically we will change only the names," Copple said. "Sequences now become departments; heads of sequences now "chair" departments and the vice director becomes an associate dean."

Advertising class

The names that Copple has proposed to go with those changed titles are:

Wilma Crumley, associate dean and chair of the graduate committee.

Donald Glover, advertising chair. Larry Walklin, broadcasting lack Botts, news-editorial chair. Emily Trickey changes from assistant to the director to assistant to the dean.

This is the same general pattern adopted by other top-flight schools of journalism at Missouri, Northwestern, and Columbia universities. "Recent rankings of journalism education programs in the U.S. has ranked us with these leaders," Copple said. "Ne-braska is rated as having one of the top eight journalism programs in the country.

Credit for the national reputation goes to the students, the faculty, and the Nebraska media, Copple points out.

Many of our professors have preferred to stay at Nebraska despite attractive job offers elsewhere," Copple says.

Devoted Faculty

They are devoted to teaching. They are proud of their service and research with the media. Several have their own national reputations, although they are not always orthodox in their approaches.

'Come to think of it," Copple added, "Their lack of orthodoxy might be the reason for their success and while we're passing out credit," Copple continued, "don't forget a long line of University administrators-past and presentwho have encouraged us.'

Typography class

Copple stresses that the School of Journalism will continue to maintain close ties with colleges in UNL, from which journalism students take classes and for whom the school offers a journalism major.

"We will continue to put emphasis on a broad, liberal education for journalism majors, stressing the importance of the ability of educated persons to express themselves through writing," he said. "Actually journalism majors spend only about 25 percent of their time studying journalism, and a portion of that is devoted to the broad area of mass communication processes."

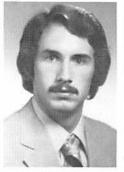

"We will also maintain our emphasis on involving our students in real-life situations that supplement academic activities," Copple promised. "Summer intern programs in the media, practical experience with campus radio station KRNU, cooperative activities with UNL's ETV station KUON, writing for the School laboratory newspaper "The Journalist" and participation in a variety of national contests that recognize the training and abilities of journalism students will continue to be basic to our program," he said.

Copple noted that the School of Journalism's reputation as a producer of sound professionals is based on this philosophy of education and due to this reputation its graduates are in

With some people, it's hit or miss.

Even for the vast majority of us who take our financial obligations seriously, balancing a budget isn't easy. Just when you think you've found the answer, inflation takes another bite out of your paycheck. And everything starts costing more. Putting the kids through school. Food. Clothes. A better home. Or even new appliances. Sometimes it makes you wonder if you ever can get ahead. No matter how hard you try.

Take an opportunity, not a chance.

Fortunately, there is someone you can turn to for help. Your Credit Union. Our business is helping people get more out of their money. We can help you save. Help you borrow. And, if you like, we can even show you how to avoid future money problems by suggesting practical strategies that really work.

We play it straight.

Too many organizations try to use personal financial counseling as a way to sell other services. A consolidation loan. A fee. A gimmicky savings account. Your credit union doesn't operate that way. Our financial counseling is free to each member. No strings attached.

We'll keep it confidential too.

Your business is nobody else's business.
We don't gossip. Or send your name to anybody. Or turn you over to somebody who charges you for their help. We believe in being private. Practical, professional counseling. It's free for the asking at your credit union.

Discover your credit union.

We're doing more for you.

FAMOUS TROPHIES IN COLLEGE FOOTBALL

by Tracy Dodds, Milwaukee JOURNAL

uring the Civil War, when Morgan's Raiders ventured into Indiana, they camped on the banks of the Ohio River in the southeastern corner of the state, not far from the little towns of Kent and Hanover. And when they passed by the old Bruner Farm, which was homesteaded in those parts in the 1840s, they would stop for a drink from the well. General Morgan himself would climb down from his horse and take a cool drink from the well's Old Oaken Bucket.

It was many years later, in 1925, that the very same Old Oaken Bucket was pulled from the well, all covered with moss and mold, and resurrected as the symbol of the football rivalry between two of the state's universities.

With a little repair work, a little spit and polish, and a proper plaque to make it official, that very Old Oaken Bucket became the trophy of the annual game between Indiana University and Purdue University.

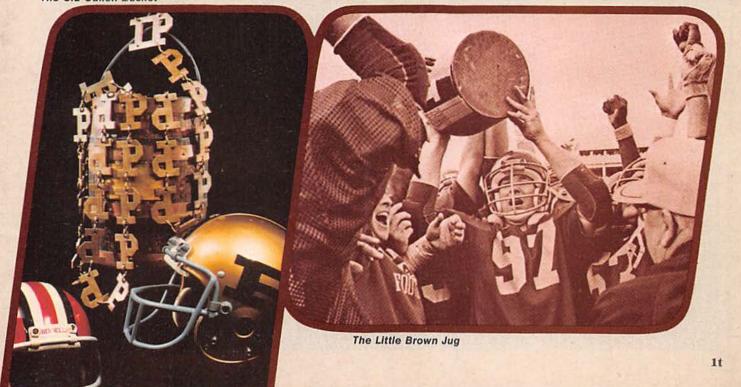

What? You say that doesn't hold water? Well, of course not! It's more than 140 years old!

But a shiny new bucket, or a golden replica of a bucket, or a freshly minted trophy or cup, would never match the charm and character of the rickety old original.

That's the whole idea. Tradition. Legend.

Every year the Bucket's chain grows longer, with an added bronze link—either a block P or a block I, depending upon who won the Bucket game—engraved with the date and the score of the game. For ties, a double link, an IP

And for special years, jewels. There is an I with a tiny rose of rubies for the year that Indiana went to the Rose Bowl. And there is a P embellished with a diamond. That was in 1943 when Purdue claimed for itself the national title.

Such is the spirit of a healthy, All-American rivalry. There's nothing like it.

The proud owner of the Bucket, of course, puts it on display, most often in the student union building. And the enemy, sick with jealous rage, sends out envoys to steal it.

It's all part of the ritual.

From time to time, the scoundrels succeed, even though guards are usually posted as the day of the big game approaches. Indiana fraternity men once stole the Bucket from a locked glass case in the Purdue union building, and it was hidden out at various fraternities on the Indiana camps all fall and not returned to Purdue until the day of the game.

Two Purdue students attempted to steal the Bucket from the Indiana Union, but they were apprehended before they got out of the building.

In recent years, the new, young coach at Indiana risked being mugged by carrying the Bucket with him wherever he went for weeks. When he finally got his hands on the Bucket, he carried it with him not only to luncheons and personal appearances, but also around the office with him, into film sessions and to greet all visitors.

Not all of the country's football trophies rate that degree of respect, but they all have stories.

Like The Little Brown Jug. Legend has it that when Michigan sent its scouts to Minneapolis in 1903 to scout Minnesota, the scouts returned with the report that the water up there was not fit to drink.

So the Michigan coaches filled a brown jug with good Ann Arbor water and took it along. After the game, which ended in a 6-6 tie, the Michigan team left the jug behind. When they wrote to Minnesota, asking that the jug be returned, they were challenged to try to win it back.

And so began the rivalry for The Little Brown Jug.

Some of the fabled trophies date back even farther. Like the Axe. It has been the symbol of the football rivalry between California and Stanford since 1933, but it dates back to 1899.

It all started at a baseball game when a cheerleader named Billy Erb used the Axe to behead a dummy Bear—a Cal Bear of course—and get the Stanford fans fired up. After the game, some of the Cal men stole the Axe and pirated it across the Bay on a ferry boat.

In order to conceal it, they sawed off the handle. Which is why, to this day, there is an Axe mounted on a plaque, but no Axe Handle.

The Axe, too, has a history laced with kidnapping and treachery. Many attempts have been made to steal the Axe from its rightful keepers, especially since 1933 when it was made the official trophy.

In 1930, an elaborate attempt was made, complete with tear gas and smoke bombs, when a group of Stanford students known as "The Immortal 21" posed as reporters and asked that The Axe be brought out to be photographed with some young men posing as football players. The ploy was successful and the Stanford students succeeded in wrestling The Axe from its custodian.

The Bell has a tumultuous history as well. Even before The Bell was a trophy, while it was still just a bell, it was stolen from the belfry of a church in Seward, Nebraska, by two fraternities at the University of Nebraska.

At that time, the two fraternities occupied the same house. But when the two fraternities went to separate houses, a rivalry developed between the two of them over which was to keep The Bell.

head coach at a major university recently thought he had one of the best players in the country all but signed, sealed and delivered to thousands of win-hungry alumni. The player had just completed dotting the i of his last name on the school's letter of intent form, said he was ready to join the school's backfield and gain 1,000 yards as a freshman and merely wanted to be pointed in the general direction of the school's record book so he could rewrite the major offensive records.

Naturally, the head coach was all smiles.

Until one week later.

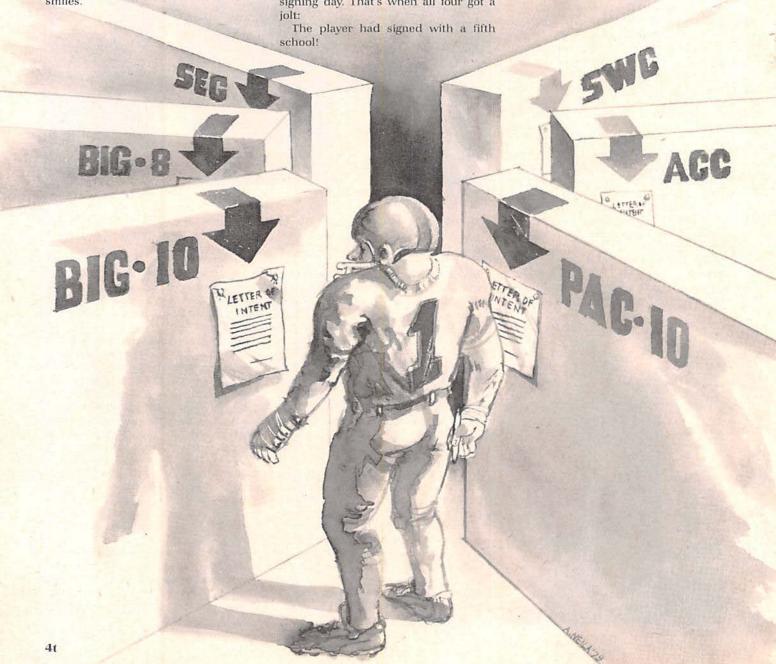

It was then that the coach discovered the bad news: His blue-chip player was still promising to gain those same thousand yards, but he had made the exact same promise to four other colleges. The star-spangled player had actually signed with four schools. And it was all perfectly legal, since he had signed with four different conferences.

Understandably, the next few days were pure agony to all four coaches. All of them waited anxiously, desperately, nervously, marking the days to national signing day. That's when all four got a falt.

"It's days like that one that make this business so tough," the first spurned coach says. "The letter of intent signing day is a time for either heartache or song. Usually both."

Indeed, the whole scholarship picture nowadays is sometimes a bit cloudy even to those who are familiar with the intricacies involved. Basically, there are two areas of worry for most recruiters—their conference letter of intent signing day and the national letter signing day. Presently, only two confer-

Tau Delta would hold some form of athletic endeavor to see which would keep The Bell for the following year.

Now, that had been going on for 35 years, and it was getting kind of old when, in 1926, Chester Brewster, the athletic director at Missouri, decided that a trophy was in order for the rivalry between Missouri and Nebraska.

At his suggestion, Frank Knight, then the president of the Missouri student body, went to the Nebraska Student Federation and all agreed upon the idea of a trophy. The Nebraska contingent suggested The Bell, and the two fraternities were thenceforth freed from their annual battle.

The Bell was engraved with an M on one side and an N on the other.

Bells are popular as annual trophies. Victory Bells were all the rage in the 1940s, when rivalries were run up between Cincinnati and Miami of Ohio, Duke and North Carolina, Pacific and San Jose State, and Southern Cal and UCLA.

In 1940, Ball State and Indiana State came up with a Blue Key Victory Bell. But Oklahoma and Oklahoma State got in ahead of the bell fad with a simple Bell Clapper in 1931.

Over the years, trophies have ranged from a Beer Barrel (established in 1925 between Kentucky and Tennessee) to a Telephone (established in 1959 between Iowa State and Missouri.) From an Old Brass Spittoon (established in 1958 between Indiana and Michigan State) to a Bear Trap (established in 1972 between Utah State and Weber State).

Some have grown in stature, prestige and tradition. Others have faded away.

Three way trophies have their place in college football lore, too. The winner of a competition between Penn State, Pittsburgh and West Virginia lays claim to "Old Ironsides," a mammoth, fourfoot, three-sided trophy.

The Nittany Lions have won or shared "Old Ironsides" 23 times since the award was initiated in 1951. Pitt has had at least a share of the trophy nine times; and West Virginia has shared the honor four times, winning it once in 1953.

The Commander-in-Chief's Trophy goes to the winner of another three way competition, this one between Army, Navy and Air Force. Established in 1977, this trophy is formal and impressive.

The 1950s, 1960s and 1970s were marked by a parade of Governor's Cups and Mayor's Trophies.

But it is the traditional trophies, with their histories full of anecdotes and skulduggery, that captures the imagination of college football fans.

Once upon a time, Floyd of Rosedale was a real, live pig. And once upon a time, Illibuck was a real, live turtle.

Floyd came on the scene in 1935 as the prize of the game between Iowa and Minnesota. Alas, the original Floyd has passed away. But there is a bronze replica of him that carries on his fine tradition.

Illibuck, a live snapping turtle named for the Illini of Illinois and the Buckeyes of Ohio State, was the symbol of their rivalry from 1925 and 1928. But he had lived in such lavish splendor in Columbus and Champaign that he died at an early age. His memory is carried on by a wooden replica that keeps a record of scores on its shell.

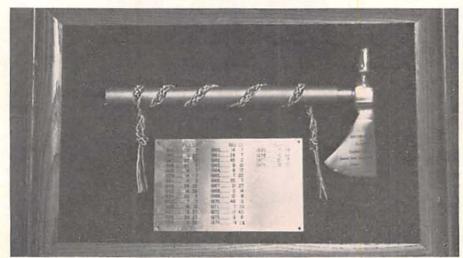

Sweet Sioux, too, had a short but illustrious reign and has since been replaced by a mere token of his former self.

Sweet Sioux was a wooden Indian, six feet tall, that was taken from a post of an exclusive antique shop in Evanston, Ill., by the men of the Acacia fraternity at Northwestern.

He was, at that time, more than 100 years old. A former Cigar store Indian and a Survivor of the Chicago Fire.

Sweet Sioux was retired in 1945, but his Tomahawk still passes back and forth between state rivals Northwestern and Illinois.

Hence, The Tomahawk, another symbol of victory... or so the story goes ...

BRIEAKING THE WISHIBONE

by Al Browning, Tuscaloosa NEWS

otorists driving past the home of Emory Bellard during the summer of 1968 must have thought it funny seeing the former University of Texas football coach playing on the front lawn with neighborhood children.

A grown man strategically moving eager young boys around the yard like Xs and Os on a chalkboard?

But people also laughed at Thomas Edison, The Wright Brothers and Louis Pasteur—brilliant inventors who saw needs and filled them.

Granted, the Wishbone offense Bellard created will not go down in history as one of the monumental accomplishments of our time, but it sure has made an already complicated sport more sophisticated.

It has also made opposing coaches—those who have to defend against the weird-looking formation—feel old before their appointed times.

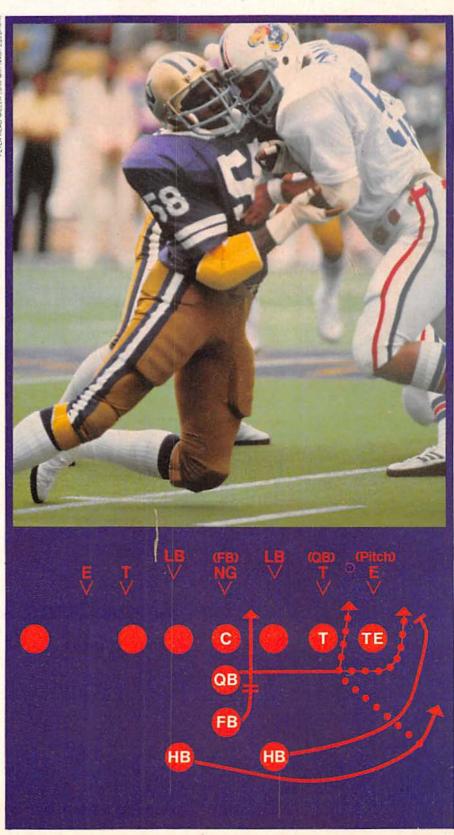

"Philosophically, there is no way to defense the Wishbone," said a former major college coach who played many wishbone teams in his day. "It is a terrific running offense which employs 11 men against 10 defenders. It necessitates a change from conventional defensive alignments.

"If you stay with the same defense throughout a game against good Wishbone teams, you will be soundly beaten."

The Wishbone—it was given that name because of a likeness to the "pully bone" in a chicken—has turned things around for several teams. One school, which switched to the Wishbone after back-to-back 6-5 seasons, now averages over 10 wins per season. Ironically, this

continued

Normal defensive coverage would put the defense as pictured right, but changes in defensive assignments are not unusual against the Wishbone, although not often are they fruitful.

Something so special is meant to be shared.

team changed its offensive strategy after playing another Wishbone to a tie!

The Wishbone is a triple-option offense based on the ability of the quarterback to read defenses after the play is in motion. The quarterback either gives the ball to the fullback over guard, keeps it and runs around end or pitches it to a trailing halfback. Fourth and fifth options come into play by the threats of a delayed pitch to the halfback downfield or a pass.

"The Wishbone is not unlike any other offense in that defenses eventually catch up with it," one coach said. cellent job stopping a Wishbone team in post-season play. The Wishbone team, which averaged almost 30 points per game during the regular season, had only three until it rallied for a fourth-quarter touchdown and two point conversion.

"Like any offense, the Wishbone necessitates risks by the defense," one coach said.

"Basically, we stopped the Wishbone by pinching our tackles and ends (shutting off the fullback thrust), turning our linebackers loose on the halfbacks (limiting the pitch) and firing our backs "But it boils down to the abilities of your players. To run the Wishbone properly, you must have a heckuva center so you can establish the fullback run. If a defense has a good enough noseguard and linebackers, it has gone a long way toward stopping the Wishbone."

A wealth of offensive personnel, particularly running backs, prompted Bellard to invent the Wishbone.

"We had three super runners at Texas—Ted Coy, Steve Wooster and Chris Gilbert—and they all needed to be on the field at the same time," Bel-

Since the quarterback has many options available, he often outsmarts the defense at the last second .

The conventional Wishbone can be stopped, but teams have started to open up the attack by going with misdirection runs and more frequent passes. That puts an added taxation on the defense.

"If a Wishbone team guarantees an opponent it will stay with the basics, it will be stopped. But when it spreads people over the field, it causes serious problems," he added.

"Are Wishbone teams running out of wrinkles? No, because as more people go away from the offense, other teams will have more success with it.

"There lies another problem with stopping the Wishbone. Due to its strange appearance and obvious complications, it is hard to prepare for in one week. Scout teams cannot learn fast enough to give a defense a good look in practice."

Afforded extra practice time between the end of the regular season and post-season play, one team did an ex(forcing the quarterback into a pressure situation).

"It is important to disrupt the quarterback. He is the trigger man and makes it all happen.

"You might say that plan makes the defense vulnerable to the pass. It does look that way, but is not necessarily true. If you reduce the quick release of the split end, you minimize the opportunity to throw the ball."

Good offensive coaches anticipate what defenses might do. One such offensive coordinator has come up with successful plans, but credits success to one thing—personnel.

"The big thing that makes the Wishbone different from most offenses is the blocking schemes it gives you with an extra halfback behind the quarterback," he said. "It offers an extra dimension—a running back taking a pitch from the quarterback and going one-on-one with a defensive halfback with a blocker between them.

lard said. "When put in charge of our offense. I started daydreaming about how great it would be to give all three of them the option of running the ball.

"In short, the triple option principle was the concept and the Wishbone was the result."

How does the inventor view the offense now?

"It is the same as always," Bellard said, "except it has now passed the test of time. It is an offense with high percentages for success, because if defenses are read properly by the quarterback, it offers the liberty of automatics (changes in attack) after the ball is snapped."

As complicated as it is, the Wishbone was given a very simple name at birth.

"We just called it 'run-right' and run-left and turned everybody loose." Bellard said.

Backs are still running and defenses continue to search for ways to stop them.

ences in the country combine their signings into both a league and national signing day. As for the other conferences, they must sweat it out through two signings, and as one coach notes, "It's a real sweat out, too. I'd give anything if there were a rule allowing only one letter of intent day. It would take care of a lot of problems for everyone."

Why?

Mainly because of the three-visit rule," the recruiter says, "If I use all of my three visits in getting a kid to sign with us on conference day, according to the three-visit rule, I can't legally see him again until after national signing day. Meanwhile, some of the big independents or any school not in our conference can come and practically live with the kid. That's when you see so many players change their minds, and that's where you see the original purpose of the letter of intent abused. A letter of intent means he has chosen only our school in the conference. A national letter means he will go to that school (if it's in the NCAA). But the NAIA can still talk to him even after a national signing letter. It's a wonder kids aren't more confused than they are, and most of them are pretty confused."

Accordingly, there are more questions being asked these days about scholarships, signing dates and recruiting analyses than ever before.

One conference," the coach says, "has a signing date of Dec. 10 or thereabouts. The national date this year was Feb. 14. It's clearly an advantage for the schools with the earliest date. They recruit all during the summer months. From August to November, they are coaching, the rest of the time recruiting. That's a big advantage. I sure hope someday we will have just one signing date. I know it Itwo signing dates is causing some very bad feelings around the country and pressure is mounting against it. It sure is hard to explain to alumni how you lost a player on national signing day. We lost two this year. in some years we've lost five (including one player who went on to win the Heisman Trophy).

"The original letter of intent purpose was to make sure the coach and player knew it was only that school he was choosing and none other. That's not the case today," the coach sighs.

While the image and tone of the letter of intent has changed, so has the actual number of scholarships offered. Four years ago, the NCAA decreed a maximum of 30 scholarships could be given a year, and 95 over a four-year period. Aimed as a cost-saving measure, the rule has made sure that any player who is fortunate enough to be offered a scholarship is a bona fide college-type

But surprisingly, most coaches agree that a walk-on player's chances are as good or perhaps even better than ever. "Most schools, including us, use this formula for recruiting players," a well-known coach reveals. "We draw up a list of the top 100 players, then divide them into categories of blues, ones and twos. A blue is a can't miss player one who is truly great; the ones are those you want to offer a scholarship; twos are really anybody not a one—they are on the marginal side."

With such intricate planning, one would think the chance of missing a "blue" or even a "one" would be small. Not so.

"Some good players will always be overlooked," says the coach. "For one thing, once every school has signed its 30, there are still players they wish they had. But a walk-on's chances are best if he wants to play at a big school in a conference. Many times, he'll pass up small school offers in order to try out for the big school he wants. We always leave open two or three scholarships each year for walk-ons. This season, we signed two; in the past, we've signed as many as four walk-ons. They are good players, too."

All of which brings up an interesting point: Who actually offers scholarships? Is it a staff decision, one coach's alternative or is it up to the head coach?

"The head coach," one nationally respected voice believes, "The head coach should offer all the scholarships and ultimately he's the one who decides which players should be offered scholarships. After they've evaluated your needs at each position, there are always several spots open. One coach will say he's got a wide receiver who's great, another coach will say he's got a lineman who could play tomorrow. The head coach has to listen to both and make a decision. It's not easy, and again, that's why so many good players are sometimes overlooked."

Even at that, it is very common for most schools to offer many more scholarships than they are allowed, simply because they know they'll be turned down in favor of other schools. "We offered 44 scholarships this year." the coach adds, "and out of those 44, 24 of them signed with us. That's a very high percentage. You always offer more than you can take.

"Now if everyone we offered a scholarship to was to say 'yes,'" he chuckles, "then we'd really be scratching our heads over which ones to take." Such are the confusing, frustrating but-ohso-very necessary ways of the letter of intent.

TV'S CAMERA MEN

THE GUYS IN THE TRENCHES

hether fulfilling fantasies or destroying a dream, their eyes hold captive the imagination of millions of Americans who comprise the most common cult in all the land: the television viewer.

They turn living rooms and dens, front parlors and back porches into nerve-tingling arenas where on any given Saturday of an autumn afternoon, college football enthusiasts live a little and die a little.

They are the cameramen, an elite team of sports specialists who capture the excitement, color and drama of college football on the air.

"Every viewer enjoys his 50-yardline seat thanks to these fellas," says ABC Sports Director Andy Sidaris. "They are more than just skilled technicians they are artists whose portrayal of the game embodies their own sonalities."

The life of a television cameraman, whether covering a college football game or working on any number of his varied and intriguing assignments, is in itself as dramatic as the story he is paid

Mike Freedman, who has been plying his trade for 30 years and who is respected by his peers as "the father of the hand-held camera," perhaps best describes his role by offering, "I'm not paid to shoot the back of a guy's head."

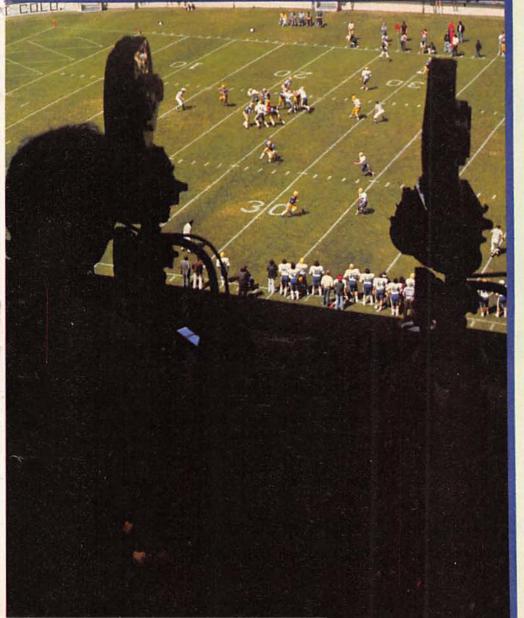

"You can tell a whole story in a man's eyes," he insists, "and you don't need a whole football field. Frustration, anger, joy, fear, a tear drop, an embracethese are the ingredients that are integral to college football, and it's our job to catch them all. We, too, are journalists and have the responsibility to help tell the whole story."

Indeed, the cameraman is part artist, part technician, part journalist ... and all gutsy.

Hovering in a helicopter above Pearl Harbor a few years ago, Freedman was shooting some "scene-sets" to be used the next day during the opening of the Hula Bowl telecast. "I was dangling out the right-hand door shooting when all of a sudden I was in the sea," he remembered. "The chopper had just lost power and crashed. One person was killed. You can say that we cameramen take risks from time to time," he understated.

Sal Folino, another member of ABC's "original" college football crew, is an engaging character with a warm smile and charming manner and has little difficulty in drawing the widest of smiles from his favorite subjects: the song girls.

"It's just a simple little camera and it won't hurt you at all," he jests to a curvaceous co-ed who belongs to the spirit squad. "Just smile a lot so Mom and Dad will be real proud of you." Suffice it to say that if the girls were voting, Sal would be "the most popular guy" on campuses coast-to-coast.

This professional goes out of his way to develop a rapport with his many subjects. "My job is to stick my lens into everything," he says with earnest professional pride, "and it certainly helps at least to make an effort to introduce myself to as many people as I can ... song girls, coaches, players. It's amazing how simple chatter helps break the ice and affords me the best possible pictures."

The life of a sideline cameraman, including such NCAA veterans as Evan Baker, Warren Cress, Jack Cronin, John Morreale, and Eddie Payne—along with Folino and Freedman—is not all fun and frolic. Yes, there are those fans who offer half their life savings to "get me on." For an instant shot on national television, the promises have been nothing less than outrageous: "a date with my daughter... dinner for two at my restaurant... the use of my Rolls Royce ... a weekend at my summer house."

"We could have an interesting lifestyle on the side if we accepted half the offers," says one of the cameramen, whose most bizarre inducement was a head of cattle offered by a rancher attending a Mid-West shootout.

Those same fans, however, can also turn into tormentors. "I can't tell you how many times I've had to duck for cover when those squishy oranges come flying from the stands," he said. "People swear at us and constantly jabber 'outta the way... outta the way.

Cameramen try to capture the whole story at a game, not just the action on the field.

A good wind on a gusty day can give the cameramen a pretty good ride.

and those die-hard fans can keep on our back pretty badly."

The cameramen also encounter law and enforcement officials who protect the sidelines, "and who don't always roll out the welcome mat for us," jests another member of the ABC camera crew. "I've had to go eyeball-to-eyeball with a few of those guys, and believe me, it's not always pleasant."

There, too, are those bulldozing fullbacks and a rash of gang tacklers "who keep you on your toes unless you want to get killed," says a veteran of many games, recalling any number of near-miss collisions along the sidelines. "You've gotta jump fast in this business and be as agile as the athletes. They can come at you like locomotives."

Coaches, trainers and team physicians "don't issue invitations to us," added a sideline cameraman, who claims a snarling glare from a coach on the sidelines "can haunt you forever."

Supported by a crane's single cable and dangling some 100 feet over the end zone. ABC cameraman Frank Melchiorre copes bravely with a special tormentor all his own; the wind.

"It can get hairy up there," admits this crew member, who is in his fourth season covering college football from that familiar perch in the end zone.

Although the four corners of his 12x15 platform are secured to the crane's cable, "they slacken with the wind and on a gusty day I can get a pretty good ride," he says. "I've banged into my share of scoreboards, but no, I don't get hazardous duty pay," he jokes.

Melchiorre's primary responsibility is to provide the replays from the end zone, goal-line stands and isolations of receivers, and he was actually forced down during an Army-Navy game (in Philadelphia's JFK Stadium) a few years ago when the winds were whirling at an estimated 40-to-50 miles per hour. "I couldn't even keep the scoreboard framed in my view-finder," he remembered, "and I knew then that it was all over. Rain and snow means that you've got to constantly wipe the lenses—which I can live with. But the wind is a completely other matter."

A curious public often beseiges the man on the perch "to keep me company up there," but he obviously turns down "some darned attractive offers." Occasionally an "observer" from the local crane company will join him on the platform "and one guy actually brought his lawn chair and a cooler," Melchiorre noted with a smile. "Here I am in my safety harness hanging on for dear life ... and this character is taking in the game picnic-style. It was an amusing contrast to say the least."

He adds with a wry smile "that college football is still something very special to me—the wind notwithstanding."

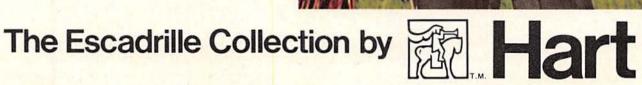

Being a cameraman is an awesome profession, admits Mike Rebich, an 18-year veteran with ABC, who added with a chuckle, "and Lord help us if we blink at the wrong time."

If you've always thought a little car meant a lot of crowding, you've obviously never looked into a Volkswagen Rabbit.

There happens to be so much room in a Rabbit that all 7'2" of Wilt Chamberlain can fit comfortably into the driver's seat.

Because the Rabbit has even more headroom than a Rolls-Royce.

As well as more room for people and things than practically every other imported car in its class.

Including every Datsun. Every Toyota. Every Honda, Mazda, and Renault.

Not to mention every small Ford and Chevy.

And, of course, what's all the more impressive about the room you get in a Rabbit is that it comes surrounded by the Rabbit itself. The car that, according to Car and Driver Magazine, "... does more useful and rewarding things than any other small car in the world..."

So how can you go wrong?

With the Rabbit you not only get the comfort of driving the most copied car in America.

You also get the comfort of driving a very comfortable car.

Because it may look like a Rabbit on the outside.

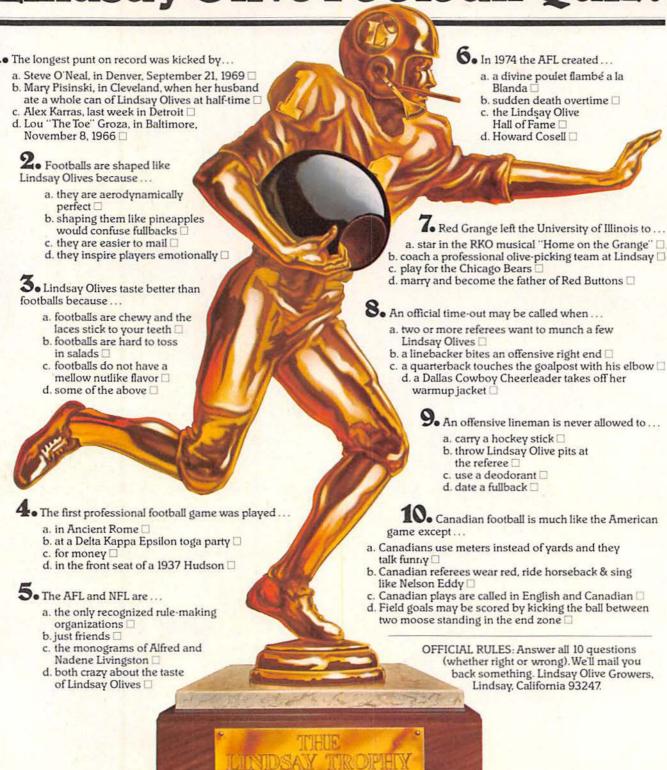

But it's a Rabbit on the inside.

THE FIRST CHEVY OF THE '8Os. CITATION. OUR MOST SUCCESSFUL NEW CAR EVER.

Ever since its introduction, people have been flooding Chevy showrooms across the country to see the 1980 Chevy Citation. And according to Retail Delivery Reports, 33,765 units were sold in its first three weeks, more than any new entry Chevrolet has ever introduced.

MID-SIZE ROOM FOR 5.

Citation's engine is mounted sideways, so the passenger compartment can be bigger. In fact, in EPA interior dimensions, Citation is classified as a mid-size car. With the back seat folded down there's room enough for two adults in front and 30 bags of groceries in back.

0 TO 50 IN 9 SECONDS FLAT WITH THE AVAILABLE V6.

In engineering tests, Citation goes from 0 to 50 in 9 seconds flat. That's with available 2.8 Liter V6 engine and automatic transmission. California figures not available. (Citation is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.)

EASY ON GAS. 24 EPA ESTIMATED MPG. 38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE.

That's with Citation's standard 2.5 Liter 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission. (Manual transmission currently not available in California. Calif. estimates lower.)

Citation's standard 4-speed transmission is made to conserve gas. It's an overdrive. And at cruising speeds the 4th gear lets the engine run slower than with a conventional transmission, helping to get impressive fuel economy.

IMPRESSIVE LONG-RANGE CRUISING ESTIMATES, TOO.

And Citation's long-range cruising estimates are just as impressive. 336 miles based on EPA estimated MPG (city) mileage figures, and 532 miles based on estimated highway MPG. Range figures obtained by multiplying Citation's 14-gallon fuel tank capacity rating by the EPA mileage estimates.

REMEMBER: Compare the circled estimated MPG to the estimated MPG of other cars. You may get different mileage and range depending on your speed, trip length and weather. Your actual city mileage and range will be less in heavy city traffic. Your actual mileage will probably be less than the highway estimate.

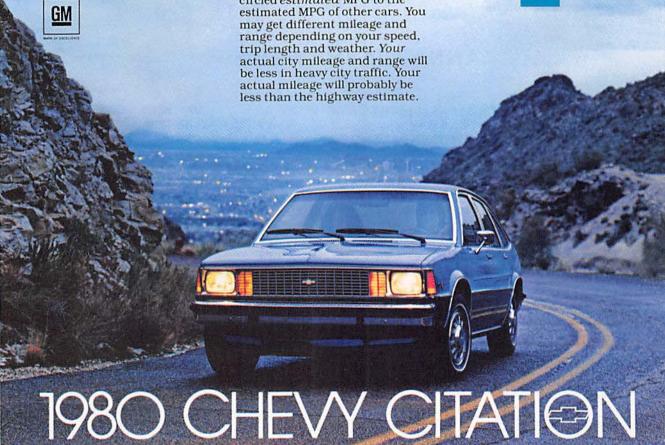

YOU'VE GOT TO DRIVE IT TO BELIEVE IT.

When you drive Citation you'll see what all the excitement is about. The way it feels. The way it maneuvers. The way it rides. And Citation's front wheel drive puts approximately 65% of its weight over the "driving wheels" to give you impressive traction on wet or snowy roads.

IT'S A WHOLE NEW KIND OF COMPACT CAR.

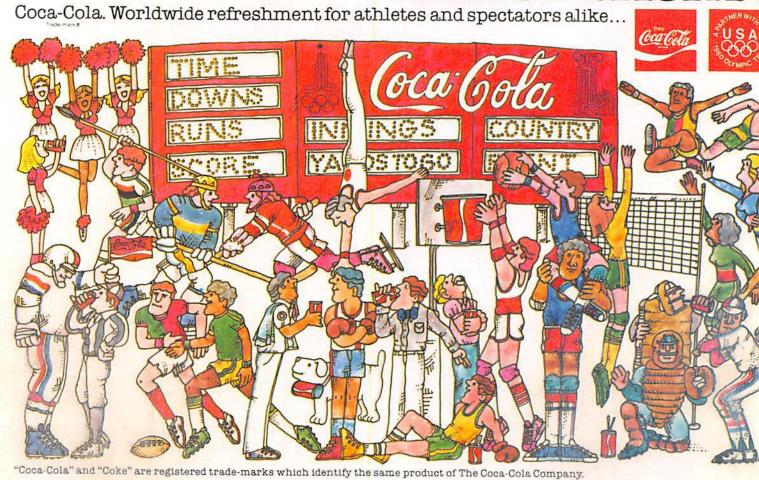

There's still a lot about Citation that we haven't mentioned. Like slip stream design to cut down on wind resistance and wind noise. The hidden cargo area in all hatchback models, so what's inside is protected from view. A dual diagonal braking system. And much, much more. That's why we encourage you to see your Chevy dealer and test drive the 1980 Chevy Citation today. This could be the car you've had in mind.

The American Eagle Radial. Why it belongs on America's finest cars.

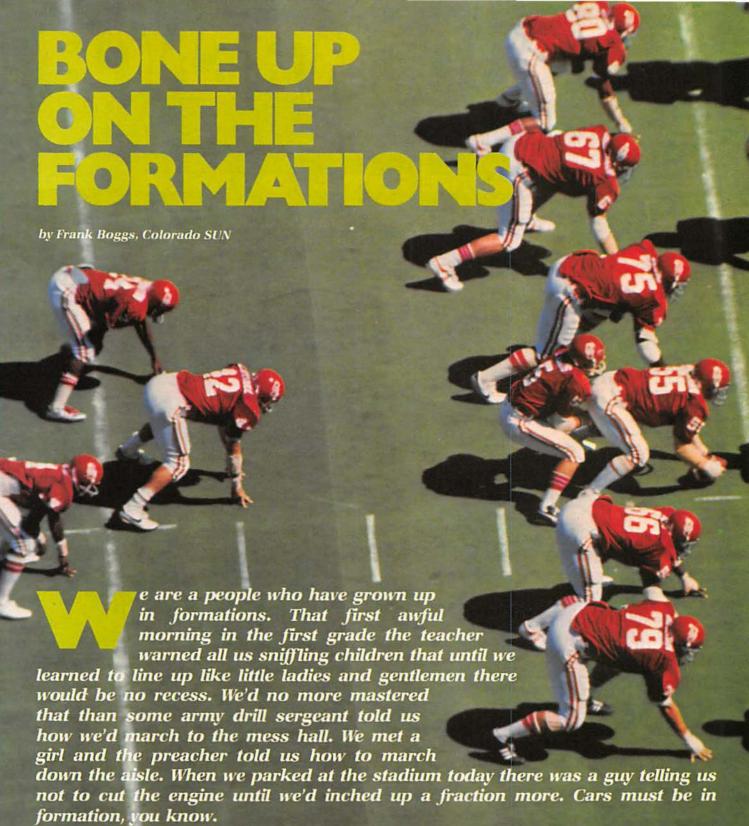

The Goodyear American Eagle Radial tire is as revolutionary today as our first rayon cord tire was in 1938 and our Polyglas in 1967 and the Polysteel Radial when introduced in 1974.

What makes the American Eagle Radial the tire for today is belts of Flexten cord. It is made from a flexible, man-made aramid fiber that is, pound for pound, stronger than steel. Flexten cord—a step ahead of steel—makes the American Eagle Radial tough and strong. Yet, the American Eagle is gratifyingly smooth riding, too.

Comfort, control and confidence are the qualities of the American Eagle Radial... the unique luxury tire designed by Goodyear for the American driver and the American road. We invite you to inspect and to enjoy American ingenuity... from Goodyear.

So, it hardly is surprising that college football teams can do nothing until lining up in some sort of formation. In fact, it sometimes seems there are as many formations as teams.

There is the Veer and the Wishbone and the I and the Pro Set and the Multiple and the Delaware Wing T and somewhere the grandfather of formations called the Single Wing. Then, depending upon the teacher, there are more variations of all those formations than there are pompon girls. Football is the only sport known that can get along by using only two letters of our alphabet—the x and the o.

THE PALLOR

Largely due to television, we hear more about formations today than ever. But if anybody ever stopped just briefly to describe how they are supposed to work, it has been so long ago we have forgotten. And, by now, it is not considered socially proper to ask. How can a lovely lady with two children be called a good mother when she is not even sure about the blocking assignments a good blocker and good pass receiver. The Triple-Option Veer was made prominent by Houston Coach Bill Veoman, who has described it as "A football system in which the quarterback either hands off to a diving halfback, keeps possession himself, pitches out to the other halfback, or passes the ball."

The quarterback, obviously, is important. The more speed he has, the better. to block. The Wishbone is not considered a passing formation, yet a quarterback who can throw is an added worry for the defense.

The I Formation—There are numerous variations, but two basic I's. One is the power-type I. It features the sweep. And the sprint draw pass usually is a key in all I offenses.

"The I quarterback," says a Rocky Mountain area coach, "is not a primary ball-carrier, therefore, you can get away with using a quarterback who has less foot-movement." Not as speedy, in other words.

The Pro Set—Most of these formations feature the dropback pass, trap plays, draws, screens, maybe a sweep. Players can line up similarly to the Veer, but they don't run the option plays.

It, too, is a quarterback-oriented formation. It is necessary to have good receivers, a talented tight end, a good pass-blocking line. It doesn't hurt to have a good back in the cast.

Delaware Wing T—The backs are sort of spread out, like the lower branches of a Christmas tree. A lot of small colleges run it; several Eastern teams use it. One reason for its effectiveness is the fact it is not seen regularly; therefore, it can be more of a problem for a defense.

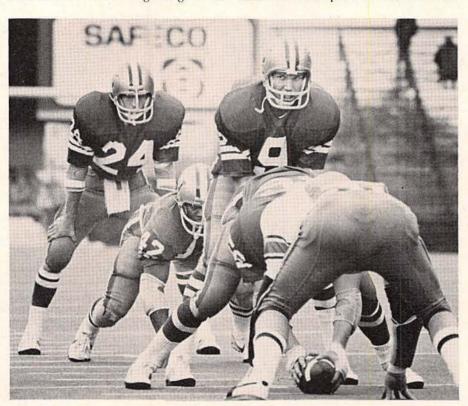

The Single Wing—You have heard grand-daddy talk about this one. It's more easily spotted because the quarterback isn't kneeling there against the south side of his center.

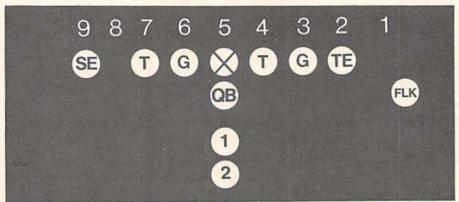

The back who takes the snap runs into a hole. However, if the hole is not there, it is suggested you make one. The Single Wing is much more difficult to locate than tickets on the 50, but a few teams still rely on it. One Division III team with excellent successes still makes it work.

When you mix a little of this with some of that you wind up running what is called—and rightly so—a Multiple offense. And we are seeing more of that today as coaches continually attempt to stay one step ahead of the defense.

A Big Eight Conference coach says, "More points are being scored each year and people are trying to combat that by putting their best people on defense. But, the contradiction to that is when you have that great, exceptional back"

The man in charge of statistical data for the NCAA has conducted surveys to determine which teams prefer which offenses. He says it is becoming increasingly difficult to gauge accurately because, while a team may say it operates out of the Wishbone, it uses so many other variations that it cannot truly be called a dedicated Wishbone team.

Going into last season, the I formation was the most widely used by college teams.

when the Veer quarterback elects to

To fulfill her role as a swell Mom, to assure the fellow with her of being a Dear Old Dad, and to make all of us better citizens, we will go at once to the formations and a few notes on what supposedly makes them tick:

The Veer—The fullback should be a strong runner. The tight end should be It is nice, of course, for the interior linemen to be rated superior, but in the Veer the offense can be efficient if those linemen are not of super stature.

The Wishbone—The quarterback had best be a durable lad, because a defender often strikes him down at about the same instant he is pitching the football to a halfback. There is more premium placed on the backs having the ability

Quality. Again. And again. And again.

Quality makes them worth asking for.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR-Frank Boggs is a sports columnist for the Oklahoma Publishing Company. His columns appear in The Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City Times and Colorado Springs Sun. He attended both the University of Oklahoma and Central State University.

A year ago this human computer glued together stats of six previous seasons and found that Wishbone teams were winning 58.2 percent of the time; Multiple offense teams 53.7; and I's 51.3; the Veers 50.7, the Pro Sets 44.0 and the others 49.5.

"It needs to be said one more time," he wrote in an NCAA information sheet, "Formations don't win games, players do."

He makes another point for thought: "The more uncertain your personnel, the more inventive you must be. That's why many offensive ideas originate at the high school level, are popularized by the colleges, then picked up by the pros.

For instance, the I was used by a high school coach in Texas a decade or more before colleges had major success with it. Now the pros use it and some call it the Pro I.

All formations, no matter how brilliant their teacher, can come to nil with the nasty fumble. And we all have watched enough football to know that the trickier the offense the more likelihood of the fumble. Right?

Not based on our Kansas City human computer.

"Coaches, television color men and broadcasters are fond of telling us that college football's triple-option offenses lose the ball more often on fumbles because of all that split-second ballhandling by a quarterback on the move," he says.

"Sorry, gentlemen, but it's just not true. The fumble odds are virtually the same no matter what offense you use."

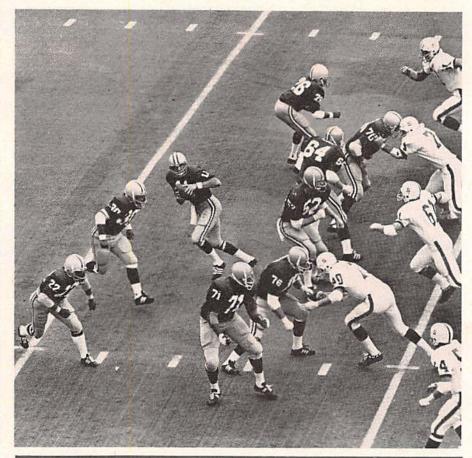

He conducted a two-year survey on this subject in the early 1970s. It covered 731 games played by triple-option major schools, 454 games involving the Veer and 277 involving the Wishbone. It included another 1,921 games played by the majors using all the other known offenses.

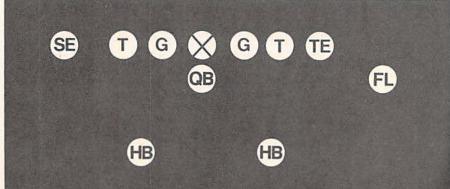

Statistics showed: There was one lost fumble for every 28.9 rushes. Triple-option teams lost one fumble for every 28.8 rushes, all the others one for every 29.0.

And his work showed that Wishbone teams actually were the safest against the fumble, losing only one fumble for every 29.8 rushes. The Veers coughed it up once for every 28.2. His reasoning: Maybe the Wishbone teams practice their formation more.

Again, surveys of which teams bank on what can be slightly misleading because some schools don't truly rely on the formation, always, that they identify with.

But, going into last season, the most

The Pro Set gives the passer two deep targets in the wide receivers and two backs for blocking protection or for use on a safety valve pass.

popular formation was the I. An NCAA count showed 50 teams would run out of the I, 34 from the Veer, 26 from the Multiple, 16 from the Pro Set, nine from the Wishbone, and only four from the "other" classification.

For every offensive coach who sits up late at night with a sick blackboard, somewhere there is a defensive coach sitting up, too. That probably explains, as well as anything, the wide variations seen in collegiate football.

It also likely explains how surprised we sometimes are by the plays called in college football.

"Actually," says a coach from the Rocky Mountain range, "football formations are not as difficult as the public has been led to believe.

"What you do is this: The center is the guy who kneels down over the ball. He hands the ball to the quarterback, who takes the snap and begins the sequence.

"And then you see what the excitement of college football is all about."

On the other hand, people ask an awful lot of our saws. Quick starting. Extra cutting power. Quiet operation. Beautiful styling. Durability. Affordability.

TIME OF POSSESSICON

The Key to Success

by Paul Attner, Washington POST

e is old and weathered and he walks with a slight limp. "Old football injury," he explained. "Couldn't get out of the way of play on the sidelines one day and got my knee banged up. Never was quick on my feet."

But he hadn't been a fabulously successful college football coach because of nimble feet. His mind—that had always been the key. He could dissect defenses like a surgeon delicately repairing an ailing heart, and they say his intermission adjustments were so precise and so effective that opponents never felt comfortable even with a three-touchdown halftime lead.

He had been a charter member of the old school of coaching before his college's board of regents finally forced him to retire. He hated the forward pass, about as much as he hated his school's No. 1 rival. "Why work at giving up the football so fast?" he would say about passing. Ah, but give him a fullback with strong hands and a front line that resembled Sherman tanks and he was in football heaven.

The reason: ball control. "Oh, they call it time of possession nowadays," he said, contempt in his tone. "New fangled terms. Those TV guys, they like fooling around with such things. Impressive to the listeners, I guess.

"But sonny, let me tell you. Whatever you call it, it comes down to the same thing. You can't score unless you have the ball. The more you have the ball, the more you have a chance to score. The more you score, the more you win."

He paused. "Follow me?"

I told him yes, but I really didn't agree completely. But that's why I had made this journey to his home. I had been indoctrinated in the gospel of the big play after watching the way wishbones and veers and wide-open passing attacks had turned college football into Saturday Afternoon Excitement. Yet some things bothered me about this whole area of time of possession and ball control, and I wanted to have a friendly debate with him on this warm summer day.

"Coach," I began, "I remember seeing a game last year when this team just took the ball and ground out yard after yard, and moved up and down the field. But everytime it got near the goal line, it would fumble, or there would be a penalty and the drive would end.

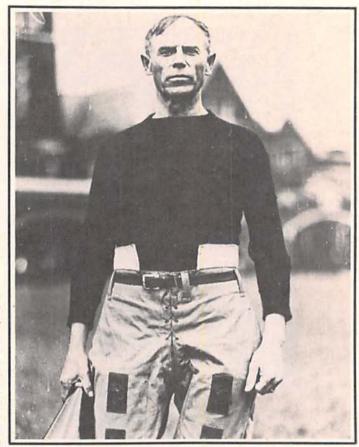

"The other team hardly touched the football, but one guy ran back a punt 75 yards to score, and they had one decent drive themselves, and they won the game."

"Statistically, they should have lost. The other club ran off almost twice as many plays, had the ball for 20 more minutes, but it didn't matter."

JOHN HEISMAN

A FOOTBALL LEGEND

he worth of the Heisman Trophy, annually awarded to the best college football player in the nation, is so well established that no testimonials are necessary. Millions of words stand to be penned about all the Heisman hopefuls, but it would be a safe bet that not many will be written about John William Heisman, the man for whom the Trophy was named. This slight will be unfortunate because Mr. Heisman is definitely a football figure worthy of far more public recognition than he has received. In his book, Football's Greatest Coaches, Edwin Pope claims that "Heisman ranked only behind Amos Alonzo Stagg, Pop Warner and Walter Camp as a contributor to the game we know today."

Heisman's football career began at Brown University in 1887. For three years, through 1889, Heisman anchored the Brown line as a 158 lb, center, living in dread of being buried by 220 lb. linemen. Despite his size football must have agreed with the gutty Heisman because he transferred to the University of Pennsylvania where he closed out his playing days with two years (1890-'91) on the Quaker forward wall as a tackle, center and end. Heisman thus became one of the first men to receive letters from two colleges, a not uncommon practice in later years.

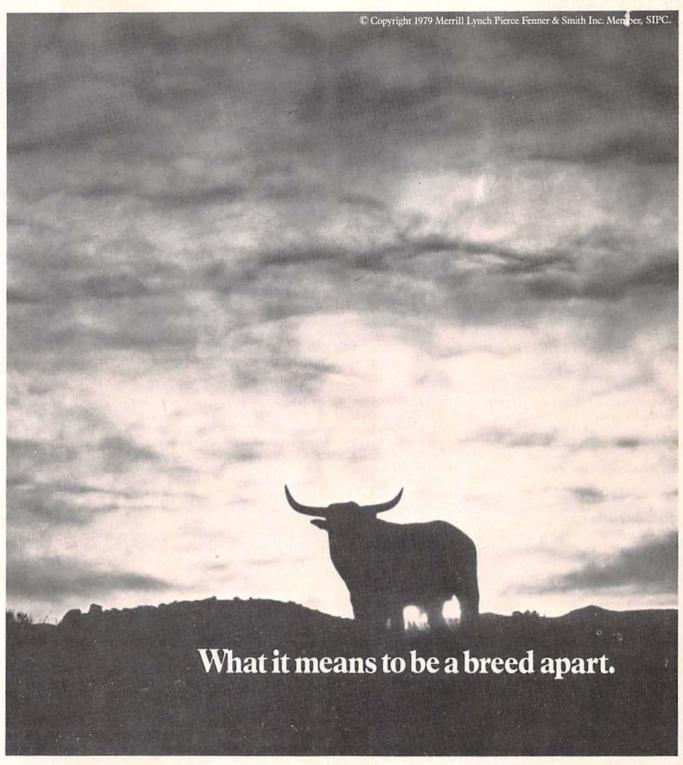

J.W. eventually did take the first steps toward gainful employment when he entered law school, but the lure of the pigskin was overwhelming and in 1892 he returned to his native Ohio to assume the head coaching responsibilities at Oberlin College. Only 23, Heisman had the benefit of the best Ivy League tutelage (although the Ivy League wasn't officially formed until 1954). Heisman had learned well: in his first year he guided Oberlin's Yeomen to a perfect record.

For the next two seasons "Old John W." coached at Buchtel (now Akron) and then back to Oberlin. His off seasons were occupied with Shakespearean acting and he enjoved using his flair for exaggerated stage English during his chalk board sessions. On the opening day of fall practice, for instance, he would hold up a football and describe it as "a prolate spheroid-that is, an elongated sphere-in which the outer leathern casing is drawn tightly over a somewhat smaller rubber tubing," adding "better to have died as a small boy than to fumble this football."

In 1895 Heisman planted his roots in the South, accepting the head coaching job at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, now Auburn. Winning 13 and losing only 3 games in his five years at A.P.L., Heisman moved on to Clemson in 1900. He coached four seasons for the Tigers. once again losing only three while accumulating 20 victories, including two drubbings of Georgia Tech. 44-5 and 73-0. The humiliation for the Yellowjackets was too much and for an increase of $50 over his Clemson salary the Engineers had Heisman as their first paid football coach.

Following the 1919 season Heisman returned to the Red and Blue of continued on 45t Imagination, instinct, and versatility (not size alone) set Merrill Lynch apart from the rest of the herd.

Too many people see only the size of Merrill Lynch; they miss the subtler qualities that truly make us a breed apart. For example:

Imagination. An oil exploration company needed $75 million, but traditional ways of raising it would have overly diluted earnings or impaired financial flexibility. Our solution: a public offering of convertible preferred stock.

Instinct. A corporate client wanted to buy back 200,000 shares of its own stock. Getting the best price was a question of market timing...of knowing when to walk out of the market and let the price sink, when to buy aggressively.

That's instinct. And it helped us buy all 200,000 shares within ½ point of the starting price.

Versatility. We can also help

Merrill Lynch
Abreed apart.

He smiled. "That's why there is a difference between ball control and time of possession," he said. "When I talk about ball control, I mean utopia. I do what I want to the other guy's defense, exploit weaknesses, keep moving, and never turn the ball over.

"You can't make mistakes, either through fumbles or interceptions, or through mental lapses. See, fans think the only mistakes are the ones they can see—a fumble, an interception, a missed tackle in the wide-open field. But there is more to it than that. A guy can miss a blocking assignment, or a back can run to the wrong hole. You can't see that from upstairs in a seat, but we know it's happening on the field.

"It's like spending days painting a portrait, then forgetting to put in the face. You've got to have a complete picture to really understand what possession and control means.

"I realize I'm talking about perfect football, and that is only a dream. But if you are fundamentally sound and you teach and coach perfection, you can turn control into victories."

He was warming up to the subject now. He leaned forward in his chair, clutched his hands, and began talking about history.

"As sure as I'm an American, I'll bet you that the top clubs over the past five or 10 years are the ones who eat up the clock the most, and turn over the ball the least. You are going to have an exception, one of those veer or wishbone teams with those sprinters in football uniforms who could make anyone a good coach. Get them free, and boom, they are gone.

"But there is a fundamental weakness, I think, in people's concept of the wishbone. It isn't really a big-play offense, at least as it has evolved now. Defenses can defend it better than before, so the wishbone is like any other good ground-oriented offense. It works when you move it consistently and keep your mistakes down to a minimum."

I didn't want to tell him that a statistician I knew once did an informal study about turnovers. He claims they are the key to winning; he found that teams that turned the ball over the least in games won 65 to 75 percent of the time.

But another statistician friend will bet his mortgage on something entirely different. He says the clubs that win are the ones that give up the fewest points. Year after year, the top-ranked colleges also are usually rated among the stingiest in surrendering points.

Evidently, the coach had some friends of his own who had done a little research. He reached into his pants pocket and pulled out a sheet of paper. "Okay young fella, let me get into this a little deeper. The NCAA folks in Shawnee Mission (Kans.) took a look at the winningest teams in college football the last five years and came up with some pretty interesting findings.

"First of all, the top four clubs were strictly running teams. In fact, they all ranked among the top five in rushing the last five years. Only one of them ranked out of the top 10 in turnovers, and that club was 11th. See the pattern forming here?

"Let's take it further. Of those four clubs, only one ranked outside the top 10 in fewest points allowed over five years. The other three, well, they were the top three in fewest points allowed. And that one club made up for its defensive problems by causing a lot of turnovers. It was in the top 10 in something the NCAA folks call turnover margin. They tell me that shows the number of turnovers you have, subtracted from the number you cause.

"I'll be fair about this, In the top 10 winningest clubs, there was one passing team and another that was so balanced it finished far down the list in both passing and running. But there are exceptions to every rule, so don't hold me to them."

He was calm now, so I figured I'd drop a bomb. "Coach," I said quietly, "I know a coach, a good one, who thinks he can control the game by passing. And he's sane, really."

There was no response, so I continued. "He says that when you run a wishbone, for example, you put ultimate pressure on a defense because you make them cover so many options. Well, he says he can do the same thing through passing.

"He says that by putting receivers in the flat, and over the middle, and deep, and swinging out of the backfield, he has so many options that the defense has to cover all of them. All he needs is an intelligent quarterback who will follow assignments and he can move the ball down the field, throw low-risk passes, eat up the clock, and win."

The old man surprised me. He didn't immediately reject the concept. Instead, it seemed he thought it was a good idea, but something he would never have tried.

"The safest thing in football is to hand the ball off and let a guy run," he said. "When you throw it, a guy can drop it, it can be intercepted, or you may never get the pass off. I'm too conservative for that.

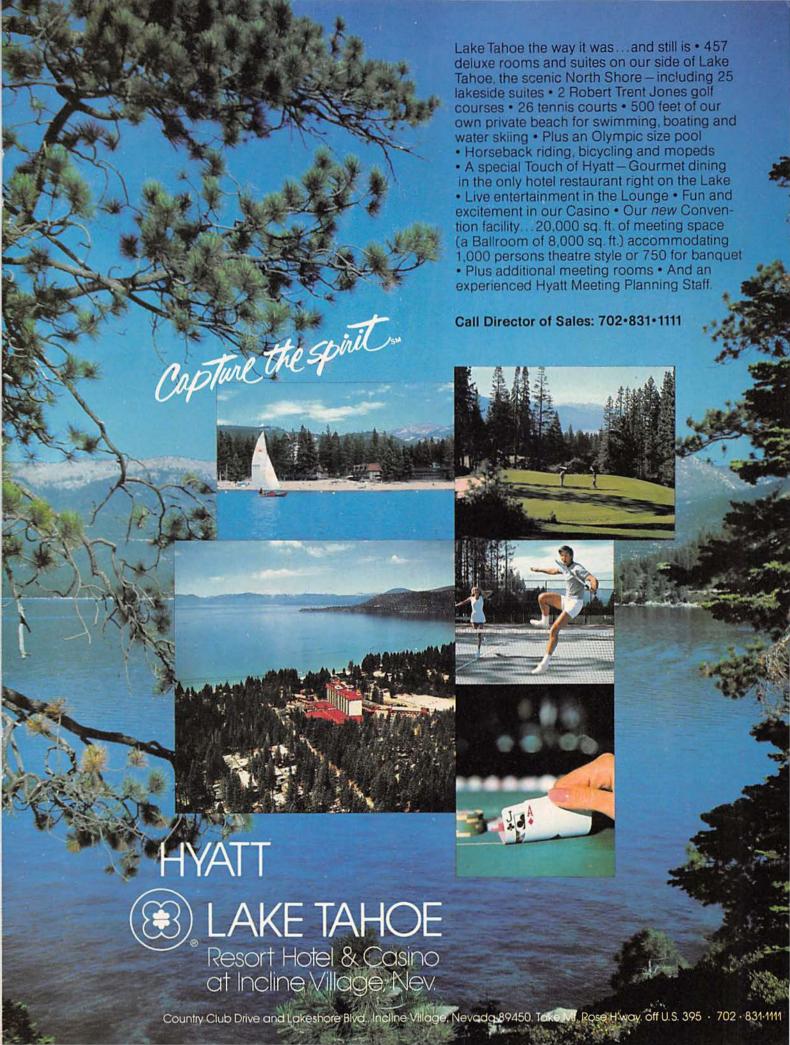

"But that coach and I aren't really far off in our thinking. To both of us, time of possession and ball control mean nothing unless there is an end result.

"That result is getting the ball into the end zone, not turning it over very much, and making sure you play good enough defense so you don't get burned by big plays.

"See, everyone thinks they have the instant formula for success. It still comes down to blocking and tackling, the fundamentals, execution.

"Give me those things and then give me the ball for the majority of the game and I'll be a winner. The other guy can't score if he doesn't have the ball, and he can't keep me from scoring if I can outblock him and outwork him."

He laughed. "The way I carry on, maybe one of these days, they'll sign me up as a TV commentator. And then let'em ask me about time of possession."

by Joe Doyle, South Bend TRIBUNE

he Cotton Bowl stadium clock read "0:02." And it was down to one play for Notre Dame.

The Irish trailed Houston, 34-28. It had been 34-12 with just over seven minutes left.

Quarterback Joe Montana looked to the bench. He got a wave of a hand from his coach. Montana, still looking for assurance, signalled the lone, last play he was to call. His coach nodded.

In the huddle, the senior quarterback took his time. This was to be the last play of his college career.

"Split right, 71 on two," Montana told his teammates. His center hunched over the ball for the last college snap of his career, and slapped the ball upward into Montana's chilled but eager hands.

The clock ticked to "0:01," and then to zeroes.

Montana took his three-step drop, rolling slightly right. Split end Kris Haines spurted quickly into the end zone and cut sharply right and toward the front corner of the end zone. Montana rifled the ball low and outside. Haines clutched it and fell to the end zone turf.

The official watched Haines clutch the ball, looked quickly to the chalk stripe on the sideline and raised his hands. "Touchdown!"

A miracle? A long-time Irish football historian, who watched his first Notre Dame game shortly after the turn of the century, joshed that "it was a genuine miracle. Never before had Notre Dame staged such a rally."

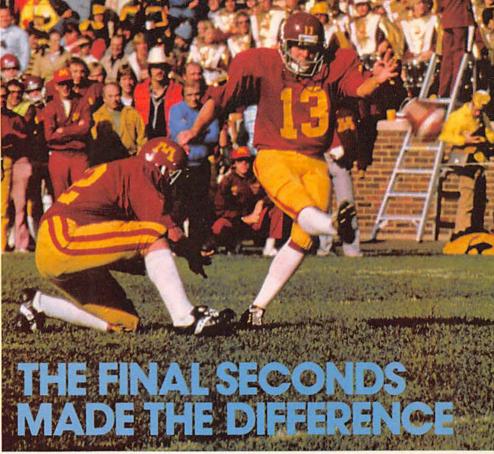

It wasn't exactly a miracle. Last minute finishes never are. All of them—and there are many every season in college football—are a matter of poise, practice and execution, particularly practice.

From mid-season on, in almost every practice, that winning Cotton Bowl play had been rehearsed. "Throw it low and outside, low and outside," the winning coach repeatedly told his quarterback. The idea was to get the ball where a defender couldn't knock it away without interfering.

Then, sure enough, when it was needed, the play worked to perfection.

This wasn't the first time a team had won with 0:00 on the clock. Nor, for that matter, was it the first time a major bowl game had been settled in the final seconds.

One of the most famous frantic finishes of recent seasons came in the 1969 Orange Bowl.

Minnesota's Paul Rogind is no stranger to final second victories.

Kansas led Penn State, 14-7, and had the ball in the closing minutes of a great defensive struggle. Then Nittany Lion All-America defensive tackle Mike Reid dropped Kansas quarterback Bobby Douglass for consecutive losses on second and third down, forcing a Kansas punt. The Lions partially blocked the punt and took over at the 50-yard line with 1:16 to play.

Ouarterback Chuck Burkhart lofted a pass that Bobby Campbell carried to the Jayhawk three-yard line. Two line plunges came up short before Burkhart carried around left end for a touchdown that narrowed the Kansas lead to Burkhart's pass for the two-point conversion was incomplete, but Kansas was detected with 12 men on the field. Given a second chance, Burkhart handed the ball to Campbell, who dove across for the winning points. The thrilling, come-from-behind 15-14 victory gave Penn State an 11-0 record and kept alive a Nittany Lion winning streak that eventually reached 23 games.

One on the NCAA's wizards of research keeps an account of such final second finishes. His figures show that these games don't always involve Notre Dame or Penn State. Final second heroics are part of college football and teams across the land have won—or lost—in the final seconds.

Late in the 1978 season, the Trojans of USC were involved in a heart-stopping victory which thrust the spotlight on placekicker Frank Jordan. The Trojans were well ahead of the Irish in the 1978 version of this great intersectional rivalry, but the Irish rallied to go ahead, 25-24, with 0:46 remaining.

USC roared back with a combination of short and long passes to bring the clock to 0:06. Suddenly, it was time for soccer-style kicker Jordan, no stranger to final second pressure, to make his field goal attempt. He kicked dead center through the uprights. The clock showed 0:02 seconds, just time enough for a kickoff. Another last second miracle.

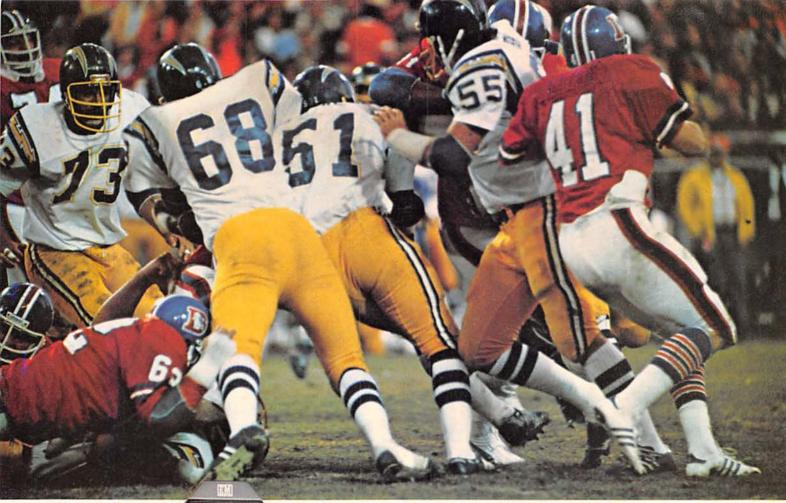

For Jordan, of course, this last second heroic was old hat—or shoe. A year earlier he had literally kicked UCLA out of the Rose Bowl, and Washington in.

UCLA had all but wrapped up the conference championship and a Rose Bowl berth. The Bruins were leading the Trojans when a pass, a ticking clock and another pass set the Trojans up for a field goal. The clock ran to under 10 seconds when Jordan booted another beauty, with once again two seconds left. That seems like a favorite time to get things done.

Jordan isn't the only late game hero in the Trojan record book. In 1931 Johnny Baker booted a field goal to beat, yes, the Irish with 1:00 remaining.

And in the 1939 Rose Bowl, playing against an undefeated and untied Duke team, unheralded Doyle Nave passed to Trojan Al Krueger with 0:40 remaining to defeat the Blue Devils 7-3.

Virginia Tech defeated William & Mary. 22-19, on a last play pass; Arkansas State nipped McNeese State, 6-3, on a game ending field goal, and San Jose State might have made some people mad when it beat Pacific, 33-31, on a last-play pass and didn't even try the extra point.

And UCLA nipped Stanford, 27-26, by getting a field goal with 27 seconds left on the clock and downed Oregon, 23-20, on a running play with 1:45.

Minnesota Gopher fans have a returning final second specialist in Paul Rogind. Last season the Gophers nipped Indiana, 32-31, on Rogind's 31-yard field goal at 0:02. That capped a rally from a 24-0 defecit. In 1977, Minnesota and Rogind beat Western Michigan, 10-7, on an 18-yard kick with 0:03 left and a few weeks later beat Washington, 19-17, on a 32-yard field goal at 0:05.

upset of Rose Bowl bound Stanford. In 1972, the list dropped to 83 and only Louisiana State's 17-16 victory over Mississippi happened as the game ended.

There were three 1973 games won on the last play. The most exciting of that year was a 69-yard punt return by Danny Buggs of West Virginia to beat Maryland, 20-13, with eight seconds left. In 1974, there were 114 furious finishes.

The list climbed to 125 in 1975. Five games were won on the last play.

Things cooled off a bit to a mere 105 cliff-hangers in 1976, but it was back to 119 in 1977, none won on the last play.

But in the Southwest, fans are still talking about Southern Methodist's 37-23 victory over Houston that year. Coach Bernie Meyer's Mustangs erupted for an incredible 20 points in the final 39 seconds.

Cornerback David Hill blocked a Cougar field goal attempt which led to an 80-yard scoring drive by the Mustangs with 39 seconds left. Then the Coog quarterback fumbled for a Mustang recovery at the Coog 2 and on the next play Tennel Atkins scored with 16 seconds left. Finally, as the clock ran out, D.K. Perry intercepted a pass and scored from the Houston 27.

Last minute heroics—we're bound to see more of them in 1979.

Pennsylvania for three seasons and then went to Washington and Jefferson for only the 1923 campaign. Heisman couldn't recapture the glory of his early years and his last job as an active coach was at Rice Institute, where J.W. completed only three years of a five-year contract. At the age of 60, in 1927, J.W. Heisman finished his career as an active coach.

Thirty-five years of head coaching should alone qualify Heisman for football immortality, but in those years, mostly the early ones, his accomplishments abound with innovations now considered an integral part of the game. A few of the Heisman introductions to football include:

- 1. The center snap. Prior to Heisman the ball was rolled from the center to the quarterback.
- The scoreboard listing downs, yardage and other pertinent points.
- 3. The "hike" or "hep" vocal signals for starting play.
- 4. Interference on end runs.
- 5. Putting the quarterback at safety on defense rather than lining the team on defense exactly as they were on offense, which pitted the quarterback against much heavier opposition.

In addition, he led the fight to divide the game into quarters rather than halves and he pioneered with such formations as the Heisman shift and the hidden ball play (in which his quarterback at Tech actually stuffed the ball under his jersey to deceive the opposiHeisman reached his coaching zenith at Tech, with undefeated teams in 1915 and 1916, although each tied once, and a perfect 9-0 mark in 1917. Under Heisman the Golden Tornados authored the worst mauling ever on a gridiron, drowning little Cumberland College of Lebanon. Tenn. 220-0! Lest that sound inhuman and merciless, understand that the game was shortened to only 50 minutes. Little Cumberland might have been an unusually weak victim that October day in 1916 but from 1914 Heisman's teams won four straight Southern championships.

Heisman's greatest achievement however is the recognition he owns as being considered "the father of the forward pass." He didn't throw the first pass, but he certainly saw one of its early flights in 1895. Heisman had long been fighting against such overwhelming power plays as the flying wedge, and when he saw the pass he realized that here was the answer to those formations, which he felt the human frame couldn't withstand. Heisman became the staunchest supporter for legalizing the forward pass long before its acceptance in 1906.

Staying away from athletics was impossible for Heisman and upon leaving Rice he became one of the organizers and the first athletic director of the Downtown Athletic Club in New York City. The Heisman Trophy is sponsored by the Downtown Athletic Club and given in John W.'s memory. On Oct. 3, 1936 John W. Heisman died of bronchopneumonia at the age of 66.

THE TRAINER KEEPS THE TEAM TOGETHER

f the old saying is true that behind every successful football team is a good coach, then it is equally valid that behind every successful football program there is a well prepared trainer.

The average trainer has taken a rigorous sequence of courses as an undergraduate in college, specializing in biology, anatomy, kinesiology, physical education and other courses that are premed subjects. He often does graduate work in physical therapy or athletic training and works part time as a sort of "intern" on the training staff of a team or school. These high academic standards are continually being updated by the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA), the governing body of university trainers.

While the duties of a trainer may vary from school to school, his basic responsibilities are the prevention and care of athletic injuries. Explains one West Coast trainer, "Essentially, my job is to make sure the players are physically fit to play the sport, to treat injuries and, most importantly, to rehabilitate injuries when they do occur.

In order to prevent injuries, a trainer has to develop quickness, agility and strength in the players. Speed work, consisting of short sprints, together with weightlifting and drills to help agility, are prescribed for football players to help them get into shape before the season starts.

In conjuction with experts who have studied body development, growth, and even the effects of foods, the trainer will set down his own program. A good trainer can tailor this program to the individual needs of players. For instance, he will prescribe exercises geared toward building upper body strength for linemen, while having the running backs and receivers do more work running and building their legs. If a player has a weak portion of his body, say a knee or an ankle, the trainer will have him do special exercises on just that portion of the body to build strength up in those muscles that need it most. "Many teams now have an assistant coach who is a specialist in weight training," commented one trainer. "In that instance he and I will work together to develop a program suited to the needs of an individual player.'

The next step in the preventive training process is to instruct players on proper eating and sleeping habits. Although college football players don't always have regular hours due to classwork and studying, the trainer does as much as he can along the lines of advising players on proper rest and balanced meals. Most major colleges have a training table during the football season and the players are fed well-rounded meals at least once a day at these sessions.

Before a game, players have weak or injured areas taped. Pre-game taping often starts as early as four or five hours prior to kickoff. A trainer must know the best methods of taping or wrapping a joint or bone so as to leave the greatest amount of flexibility, but yet protect against injury. Ankles, knees, shoulders and wrists are the most common parts of the body that are taped as preventative measures. One university trainer explained it this way, "On game day I will tape or pad any part of an athlete's body, if he requests it. After all, he's the one that has to go out and do battle for 60 minutes. If extra padding or taping gives him a psychological edge-a feeling of confidence or preparedness-then I'm all

When an injury does occur, the trainer and his assistants are quick to reach the injured player. "It helps us if we see how the man was injured. Often he can't specify the location or the degree of the injury. Whenever possible, we try to have the player leave the field under his own power. It's better for him—better for the other players."

The trainer, in conjunction with the team doctor, then works quickly to reduce the effects of the damage to the body and get the player back in action if possible, or remove him from the game for further treatment.

After the immediate impact of the injury has been reduced, the trainer puts the player on a treatment/rehabilitation program to build up the injured area once again and to help him regain the endurance and reactions lost while out of action.

The trainer's fight to keep his players in top shape shows up in a number of ways on the field in terms of how well a team plays toward the end of a game and even in the mental aspect of football.

"It's hard for somone to think when he's tired. There tend to be more errors when players are tired, and there is no question that when a player is tired, he also gives up physically. Physical conditioning, of which the trainer plays a large part, is one of the most important aspects in football. With so many games decided in the fourth quarter, it's almost always the best conditioned team that wins."

COULD A SHADOW SHED LIGHT ON THEIR SECRET?

The secret of these good looking Haggar Imperial® fashions is the styling plus fine fabric. It's a comfortable blend of Today's Dacron® from Burlington Menswear® and worsted wool to resist wrinkles and keep you looking good.

The door creaked a cautious welcome as they pushed it open. Their eyes scanned the sparse office, locked on mine, then darted to the darkened hall. Who were they? Why were they here?

Two things I knew for sure. First, they were being followed. And, second, they had real class. Lots of it. Just the cut of their clothes said style and elegance. The fabric said taste.

Questions buzzed in my mind like hornets. But, in this business it's money first. So I told 'em my fee and took a swig of cold coffee. They went for their wallets and suddenly, the pieces fit. I caught a glimpse of a familiar label inside their coats, and knew why they were followed. There ain't a dame around who can pass up the great looks of Haggar Imperial slacks and sport coats.

LOCATION LIMIT:

A home insurance policy that comes closer to giving you FULL replacement cost when you suffer a loss.

Most policies have these limits:

- 1. A fixed amount on your dwelling.
- 2. Personal Property (50% of the dwelling amount.)
- Personal Property (50% of the dwelling amount.)
- Additional living expense (20% of the dwelling amount).

With a maximum limit on each of these four items there can be no flexibility should your loss on any item(s) exceed the limit for the item(s).

Our Policy Offers:

1. A location limit amount at the location in the policy. This means that if you suffer a loss under your LOCATION LIMIT policy you can collect for your proven combined loss to the dwelling, outbuildings, personal property and for additional living expense up to the location limit amount, with no "per item" limit restriction.

Her Big Red pride is winning.

Last year more than 150 women participated in Nebraska's intercollegiate athletic program. Our Big Red athletes are feeling the excitement of what a strong athletic program can do.

- Our volleyball team ranked 17th in the nation.
- * A record of 23-13 ranked basketball 3rd in the Big 8.
- * Our gymnasts took first in the Big 8 and ranked 11th nationally.
- * 18 out of 24 school records were broken in swimming and diving.
- * We were 4th in track and field Big 8 indoor championships.
- * Our softball team had a 19-12 season.
- * Our tennis players are Big 8 champs in singles and doubles.

Not a bad overall record for a good athletic program. But, we can always improve. In recruiting. In scholarships. In training. And in building an even stronger program in years to come. Show your support of Big Red Women's Intercollegiate Athletics. Send us your check...or your name and address, and we'll show you how to become a Big Red Boost Her Club member. Cornhusker Wheel Club 1979

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds.

These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

KODAK HONORS ALL-AMERICANS

Autumn—the season for the thrills and pageantry of college football. The cohesiveness that has made our country the great land it is can be found every Saturday in stadiums of every size throughout the land as gifted college athletes and loyal followers combine to creae an unrivaled spectacle.

At the University of Nebraska, this same aura hangs over Memorial Stadium as the Cornhuskers perform on the gridiron that has brought fame to many sons of yesteryear.

Recall the names Bob Brown, Larry Kramer, Tony Jeter, Walt Barnes, Wayne Meylan, Bob Newton, Johnny Rodgers, Larry Jacobson, Rich Glover, Willie Harper, Daryl White, John Dutton, Marvin Crenshaw, Dave Humm, Rik Bonness, Dave Butterfield and Kelvin Clark. What do they have in Common besides being famed members of past Nebraska teams? All were members of Kodak All-America football teams. The tradition for recognition of individual excellence in college football dates back to 1899 when Yale Coach Walter Camp selected the original All-America football team. This college football tradition continues today with the Kodak All-American team as selected by The American Football Coaches Association.

Eastman Kodak Company is proud to have been associated with the AFCA and the All-America team since 1960. The young men deemed recipients of this most prestigious honor reflect the achievement of excellence that is truly part of the American tradition.

The standard of greatness achieved by Walter Camp shines on these individuals. Football players, yes, but All-Americans all the way.

THIS YEAR 2000 FOOTBALL COACHES WILL AGREE ON ONE THING:

THE KODAK ALL-AMERICA FOOTBALL TEAM

At the end of this season, the American Football Coaches Association will agree on 22 college football players who are representative of the best in the nation. For these young men, it will be an unequalled honor to be recognized by the men who know the game best the coaches. There are many All-American football teams. There is only one selected by the college football coaches. The 1979 Kodak All-America Football Team. Watch for it.

demand. "Despite growing numbers of graduates, we have been fortunate in being able to find jobs for nearly all who graduate with the intention of going into the profession."

Journalistic Stars

Placement of graduates is not the Schools of Journalism's only measure of success. Its quality program has been in operation long enough that a number of UNL graduates are reaching leadership levels in the journalism profession nationally. Copple points to journalistic stars such as Jim Risser of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, a two-time Pulitizer Prize winner, plus a number of other leading professionals and executives prominent in newspapers, magazines, broadcasting and advertising.

Neale Copple Dean, School of Journalism

Also basic to the School of Journalism program is service to the profession and to the media, in Nebraska, regionally and nationally. "These services benefit us as well as those we are trying to help. The media helps the School of Journalism a great deal financially, providing gifts for scholarships, extra programs and equipment that could not be obtained through appropriations," he noted.

Media gifts provide much of $47,000 annually for scholarships. They also provide about $150,000 to $200,000 each year for printing and broadcasting equipment, supplies and programs.

Most recent example of this support is the successful completion of a $125,000 drive financing the purchase of computer-linked production equipment such as that now being widely adopted by the newspaper industry.

"Among the donors to this important equipment acquisition project were nearly all of Nebraska's daily newspapers, plus the newspaper related Gannett Newspaper Foundation, the Stauffer Foundation and the Ben Snow Foundation," Copple said.

"Similar support has come from broadcasters and advertising professionals," he added.

Woodward's 'name game' a gridiron classic

Whether Walter Camp or Caspar Whitney originated the annual selection of all-America teams remains a point of argument among some college football historians. But there is no question as to the identity of the true pioneer in putting together, mirthfully, what he called his "Irregular All-America." The late Stanley Woodward, recognized as perhaps the ablest sports editor in America in his heyday at the New York Herald Tribune, spent many hours in fabricating fascinating player-college name combinations. He even consulted with "scouts," scattered geographically. Much of the charm of such whimsy is to be found in solving the correct punctuation in reference to sound production and intonations. With many true football fans, it became a name game. And still is, in some sections of the country.

Here are my favorite first and second teams selected by Woodward. If certain names stump you, pass on to the next name and come back:

Bal, Lehigh	E	Munova, Miami
Hunschbacher, Notre Dame	T	Cedarczoff, Lebanor
Gardnov, Ala.	G	Spahnisch, Maine
Mentleigh, III.	C	Cann, UCLA
Souper, Marquette	G	Snaigue, Pitt.
Youez, Marshall	T	O'Howigh, Miss. U.
Hay, Baylor	E	Sella, Bates
Frivel, La Salle	Q	Ahmfein, Hawaii
Markida, Lafayette	HB	Inkum, Tex.
Huyubin, Dayton	HB	Fertham, Ore.
Brusyatietwicz, Colgate	F	DeBelza, St. Mary's

With the advent of two-platoon football, Woodward adapted to all-America offense and defense units, continuing to succeed in producing smiles, chuckles and even hearty laughter. He completed this selection shortly before his death:

OFFENSE		DEFENSE
Schlodoun, Tulane	E	Wytecriss, Mass.
Mann, Furman	E	Spelada, U-Conn.
Uaidoniponda, Sewanee	T	Strentha, Tenn.
Snowdin, Buffalo	T	Prehz, Ala.
Tregrozin, Brooklyn	G	Mietmiem, St. Louis
Beticroquers, New Mex.	G	Yurinda, Army
Spray, Ursinus	C	Grand, Kenyon
Proto, Cal.	В	Ithadda, B.U.
Taingonaraino, Mo.	В	Wearan, Wash.
Cheezitda, COP	В	Chierfrolle, Notre Dame
Pigue, Penn	В	DeBoisfromme, Syracuse

On one occasion Woodward picked three backs from the same school: Fergaard, Fercontre, Anfer, Yale.

Just as unlikely a joker as Woodward, from his dour mien, was his good friend Asa Bushnell, longtime executive secretary of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association. It was Bushnell who put a humorous concluding touch to one of the most embarrassing experiences ever suffered by a football referee.

In the middle of the 1940 season, during a game between Cornell and Dartmouth, a field goal had given Dartmouth a 3-0 lead early in the final period. With less than five minutes left to play and the ball in midfield, Cornell took to the air and moved to Dartmouth's five-yard line, first down and less then a minute left on the clock.

Cornell picked up three yards on the first play, one more on second down. On third down, there was scarcely any gain. To stop the clock, Cornell called time out, and was penalized five yards for delay of game. This placed the ball on the six-yard line. On fourth down, Cornell's pass attempt into the end zone was incomplete.

William H. "Red" Friesell, a referee of long-proved excellence, put the ball on the 20-yard line, in Dartmouth's possession. But after a consultation requested by the Cornell captain, Friesell changed his mind and put the ball on the six-yard line to give Cornell another down. Later it became known that the Cornell players thought there had been a double-offsides penalty on the previous play, the incomplete pass. With six seconds left, Cornell scored a touchdown and apparently won the game, 7-3.

Sports writers covering the game thought that Cornell had scored on a fifth down and so reported it. Friesell admitted that he might have made a mistake. On Monday, after Cornell officials had studied the game films, which showed five downs and no evidence of a double-offsides, they called Bushnell, who forwarded the information to Friesell, who expressed his regret. Cornell athletic director Jim Lynah and head coach Carl Snavely both sent telegrams to Dartmouth relinquishing claim to the victory and the score was recorded officially as Darmouth 3, Cornell 0.

Knowing fully how low in spirit his good friend Friesell would be, Bushnell sought to cheer him up with a telegram sent to Red's home. The message was worded: "Don't let it get you down, down, down, down, down, down, down, down."
